Hi Gary,

This is one of those increasingly rare emails that was actually written by the person whose name is at the bottom. 😊

I know you're busy, so if you only have time to read one paragraph, here's what I'd like you to know.

I believe there's a good chance we could help BlueCrest redirect money that's currently being spent with suppliers back into the business—without asking you to invest new money to find it. I'd welcome 20 minutes to show you how that works, and if it doesn't seem worthwhile, you can simply tell me no.

If you don't want to go further and aren't sure about meeting just yet, I would encourage you to do some quick research on us: <https://www.eragroup.com/consultants/jeff-peduto>.

If you've made it this far, thank you.

I spent some time learning more about BlueCrest. What stood out wasn't a financial challenge—it was the amount of operational complexity the business manages. Between manufacturing sophisticated communications equipment, delivering software solutions, and supporting customers with a global service organization, it's clear your team has plenty of opportunities to focus its attention.

One thing I've learned over the years is that every organization has unnecessary operating expense. That isn't a reflection of how well it's managed—it's simply the reality that leadership teams can't continuously optimize every category of indirect spend while also focusing on customers, employees, innovation, and growth.

That's where we come in.

Here's how we typically work:

1. We demonstrate our approach to identifying opportunity through our proprietary SpendVue spend analysis platform.

We show you how our platform analyzes indirect operating expenses and highlights categories that may warrant a closer look.

2. We perform a complimentary customized assessment using your data.

Using a simple export from your accounts payable system, our specialists identify where meaningful savings opportunities may exist.

3. You decide.

We review the findings together, and only then do you decide whether it's worth pursuing any of the opportunities we've identified.

The most important part is this: The work pays for itself.

Our fees are funded from the savings we create, so there is no new money coming out of your budget. In other words...You don't have to spend money to find money.

It's entirely possible our assessment concludes that BlueCrest is already performing as well as the market would reasonably allow. If that's the outcome, we'll tell you. That confirmation has value too.

If you're open to seeing what SpendVue looks like, I'd welcome the opportunity to stop by your Danbury office and walk you through it or demonstrate it over a video call.

Either way, thank you for your time, and I wish you and the BlueCrest team continued success.

Warm regards,
Jeff Peduto
